

COMMUNICATION

Andrew C. Jones Ph.D.

Albert Hall Room 303

Phone: 304-637-1691 – Email: jonesa7@dewv.edu

Davis & Elkins College
DIVISION OF HUMANITIES

QUESTIONS

Do you ever ask yourself:

- How do people get to know each other?
- How do people maintain a relationship, breakup, get back together?
- How do you persuade people?
- How does new communication technology change the world?
- What can you do with a communication degree?

If you want to know the answers to these and other questions, fill out an application for Davis & Elkins College and select “Communication” as your major!

UNIQUE AND INTERDISCIPLINARY COURSES

- Argumentation
- Interpersonal Communication
- Media Studies in Communication
- Intercultural Communication
- Histories of Rhetoric
- Filmmaking
- Public Relations
- Digital Media
- Interactive Media Design

13:1

45 Undergraduate Programs

Student to Faculty Ratio

<700

Students Enrolled

COMMUNICATION

Andrew C. Jones Ph.D.

Albert Hall Room 303

Phone: 304-637-1691 – Email: jonesa7@dewv.edu

Davis & Elkins College
DIVISION OF HUMANITIES

WHY MAJOR IN COMMUNICATION?

- Communication consistently ranks as a top skill employers seek in new hires, and interpersonal communication skills are among the most important skills employers consider when making hiring decisions.
- A degree in Communication...
 - indicates your mastery of the most sought-after skills for an array of vocations.
 - provides a solid foundation for the career changes you will experience as you discover your vocation.
 - prepares you to construct your social world through building strong relationships, collaborating towards common goals, and strategically seeking the public good.
- As a graduate with a degree in communication you will engage the world through skillful symbolic intervention while adapting to rapid social and technological change.

Communication courses at D&E emphasize the breadth of theory, research, and practice in communication studies by introducing you to recent social scientific discoveries, developing performative skills, and mastering the humanistic foundations of the field.

To find out more, contact Dr. Jones or reach out to an enrollment advisor today!

