Community and corporate health students at Davis & Elkins College have the opportunity to build their passion for health and wellness into a career.

Through a variety of health-related courses, students will build their skills in not only sport science but expand their knowledge in cross-curricular studies including nursing, psychology and business. Students can also expect to gain hands-on experience outside of the classroom through independent studies and practicums with health care specialists in the community.

Careers in the health and wellness fields are expected to grow at a faster than average rate in comparison to all occupations.

GRADUATE SUCCESS STORY

"My education at Davis & Elkins College has extended my knowledge and developed me into the individual I feel is ready to be in the real world. Studying Community and Corporate Health has given me insight on what I want to do in the future and how I want to make an impact on individuals' lives. Davis & Elkins College prepares their students and puts them in the best position possible to succeed."

- Jay Kilpatrick

"Healthcare is changing. Our focus is no longer on treating disease, but rather on bringing better health to life through wellness initiatives and population health programs. The Davis & Elkins College Community and Corporate Health program is preparing students for new emerging roles in chronic disease management and prevention. These will be the providers and partners in caring of tomorrow."

- Mike Bell, Foundation Director, Davis Health System
