PROGRAM HIGHLIGHTS

- Small seminar-style classes where students build strong relationships with their peers and professors, including small independent study seminars on topics chosen by students.
- A variety of courses and experiences that foster a deeper love and understanding of the breadth of human experience and quest for meaning.
- Assignments that develop the student's ability to synthesize complex information, conduct meaningful research and communicate that information clearly in written and spoken form.
- Activities and exercises that build creativity, innovation and empathy, which makes our graduates highly sought after by organizations of all kinds (e.g. business, nonprofits and government agencies).
- Service/study trips to Kenya, Nicaragua, Mexico, Appalachian service projects.

CAREER OPPORTUNITIES

After graduating from D&E in 2014, Robin Stillwater turned down Harvard to attend Union Theological Seminary in NYC, where she completed a MDiv. Robin has served Unitarian Universalist Churches in NYC and Los Angeles, and has completed her certification as a chaplain with the U.S. Veterans Administration.

Kaia Kater-Hurst, class of 2016, international folk and blues recording artist with four highly acclaimed studio albums, has used her D&E philosophy and religious studies degree in her justice-oriented lyrics and social activism.

“The religious studies and philosophy classes at D&E prepared me well for the rigors of graduate school, as well as giving me diverse and committed friends.”
– Robin Stillwater, Class of 2014
